Ethiopian Planes Said to Bomb Refugees Heading for Sudan

By Jay Ross mational Herald Tribus

PARIS - Ethiopian Air Force jets have bombed refugees from the northern province of Tigre who were trying to reach Sudan, relief officials say, compounding the mis-eries of thousands of people trapped between starvation and

For Sudan, flanked by Ethiopia in the east and Chad to the west, the strike that had led to an influx of as many as 175,000 refugees in the last two months is threatening the country with the prospect of famine, the officials say.

The bombing of a group of about 1,500 refugees on Dec. 3 killed 18 persons, many of them ehildren, and wounded more than 50, Asfaha Hagos, an official of the Tigrean People's Liberation Front, said in a telephone interview from London.

An official at the Ethiopian Embassy in Paris denied the allegation, but it was independently confirmed by Western diplomats and relief officials, most of whom asked that they not be identified.

Dr. Alain Moren of the French relief organization Doctors Without Froncers said he treated a number of the survivors for shrapnel wounds at a relief camp at Tekalubab, 10 miles (16 kilometers) east of Kassala, near the border, before he returned to Paris last

The drought in both the eastern and western parts of Sudan, which until recently was thought to have been spared the worst of the devastation, "has wiped out everything we have accomplished in the last 15 in 20 years in Sndan," according to Michel Barton, a spokesman for the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees in Geneva. About 130,000 long-term Ethiopian refugees in eastern Sudan wbo had been self-supporting for sever-al years are oow "all back on full rations," he said.

The influx of refugees adds to internal drought problems that have forced 40,000 oomads from western Sudan to trek up to 400. miles to camps outside Khartouin and Omdurman. They have little

Mr. Barton, of UNHCR, said the first three weeks of January could be foodless" in the camps unless an international appeal produced quick results. However, Mr. Barton said there "is not any imminent catastrophe." He explained, There's never enough food in the camps in Sudan." About 1,000 miles across Sudan

The reason, they said, is that methyl isocyanate is soluble in water and degrades rapidly into a harmless substance.

Bonn European Deputy Faced 1980 Terrorism Charge

By James Markham New York Times Service

BONN - A West German member of the European Parliament was denied permission Monday to enter Israel with five other representatives of the leftist Greens party because of her conviction four years ago on terrorist charges.

The Israeli decision, which came as the Greens delegation was in Beirut on a Middle East tour, brought into relief a simmering controversy within the five-yearold party over the strident anti-Israel tone of a working document prepared for the trip.

According to Israeli diplomats, the decision to ban Brigitte Heinrich, a 43-year-old Greens deputy in the European Parliament, was made because of her 21-month sentence in 1980 on gun-stronggling charges in Karlsruhe.

Testimony at her trial pinpointed Ms. Heinrich as a link for West German gnerrillas who were the Greens' Middle East delegation was a subject of controversy within the organization. A Bundestag dep-oty, Otto Schily, dropped out of the trip because of her presence, according in party sources.

Further attention was focused on the visit when a confidential working paper drafted by Uli Tilgner, a Greens official, was discovered by journalists. Although Mr. Tilgner wrote that "on tactical grounds" the document should not be made public — "so that we don't get visa or meeting problems" — it was found lying on a table in Bonn's press center.

Moscow Warns on New Arms

Gorbachov Says U.S. Must Ban Space Weapons

By Michael Getler Washington Post Service

LONDON — A member of the Soviet leadership, Mikhail S. Gorbachov, said Monday that there was little hope of stopping the nu-clear arms race unless the United States agreed to ban weapons in Soviet leaders, including President Konstantin U. Chernenko, ntmched "quite a serious impor-tance" to the "new Soviet-American talks scheduled to start in Geneva with the purpose of reaching mutually acceptable ac-cords on the whole range of issues eoncerning nuclear and space weapons," he said.

Mr. Gorbachov is believed in be the second most powerful figure in the ruling Politburo.

He added: "I would like to stress that in present circumstances it is especially important to avert the transfer of the arms race to outer space. If it is oot done, then it would be unreal to hope to stop the nuclear arms race."

The statement, in a luncheon speech, was the first public indication since Mr. Gorbachov arrived Saturday in Britain of the emphasis Moscow is putting on trying to halt Rengan administration projects on space defense, including and-satellite weapons tests.

His remarks suggested that Sovi-et demands on limiting space weaponry could become an immediate problem in Geneva talks oo Jan. 6 and 7 between Secretary of State George P. Shultz and Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko.

Those talks are meant to try to work out a formula for resuming arms negotiations that were suspended when the Soviet Union walked out last year. While the Reagan administration has indicated that it is willing to discuss space weaponry, it has put more emphasis on dealing with the issue of limiting intermediaterange and intercontinental ouclear missiles already in place. Mrs. Thatcher, in July, called for negotiations and mutual restraint or we may see space turned into a new and terrible theater of war." On Sunday, British sources made it clear that both Britain and Moscow were concerned about a space arms race. Mrs. Thatcher, in a British Broadcasting Corp. interview, was asked about Soviet demands for a bans on space weapons. She said: "Obviously you can't stop research from going ahead, but I think one does not want to go into a higher and higher level of armaments." Mr. Gorbachov's visit is viewed as positive and a potentially important turning point for British-So-"I like Mr. Gorbachov," Mrs.

JERUSALEM — As his libel case against Time magazine unfolds in a courtroom half a world away, some of Ariel Sharon's countrymen find themselves caught between two impulses.

On the one band, Mr. Sharon's opponents in Israel would not mind seeing Time defeat him in court, thus leaving unchallenged the finding of the Israeli commission of inquiry that be was indirectly responsible for the massacre of Palestinian civilians by Christian Phalangists at two Lebanese refugee camps.

But there also is broad sentiment that Time magazine libeled Mr. Sharon and, indirectly, Israel. Many of Mr. Sharon's enemies, not to mention his supporters, would love to see the famous general slay the American media dragon in its own backvard.

"There is a feeling among many people that this trial is the right cause, against the right medium, but not necessarily by the right man." said Ehud Olmert, a Likud member of the Knesset, Israel's parliament, who has testified

Wellington to Bar U.S. Nuclear Ships

WELLINGTON, New Zealand (AFP) — The U.S. government is to be told shortly in a formal note that visits to New Zealand by its warships that are nuclear-powered or carry nuclear arms are "out of the question." Prime Minister David Lange said Monday.

Mr. Lange, who heads the ruling Labor government, said he expected a request early next year for specific vessels to visit at the end of the "Sea Eagle" exercise, which will be held off the Queensland coast in February and March under the Anzus pact. Warships from Australia, New Zealand and the United States, which are the three members of the pact, are to participate, but nuclear-powered or nuclear-armed vessels would not come to New Zealand after the exercise, Mr. Lange said.

He said the government would make an assessment as to whether vessels were carrying nuclear arms, since U.S policy is neither to confirm nor deny the presence of such weapons aboard specific ships.

U.S. Ends Objection to Poland in IMF WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration said Monday it has formally dropped its opposition to Polish membership in the International Monetary Fund, lifting a sanction imposed after martial law was declared in 1981.

The State Department spokesman, Alan Romberg, said the adminis-tration had concluded that Poland had carried out its commitment for a

U.S. Group Doubts POWs Still Alive

HONOLULU (UPI) — Six U.S. congressmen who recently completed a six-day visit to Vietnam, Cambodia and Laos have said they doubted that Americans captured during the Vietnam War were still alive.

The congressmen also said they believed that the U.S. government should not support Pol Pot, the deposed Cambodian leader, and called deaths under his rule "a holocaust." The bipartisan delegation was to return to Washington on Monday.

The possibility of Americans being held against their will in any of these countries, I believe, is very remote," said Representative Larry J. Hopkins, Republican of Kentucky, who cited the Kampuchea area of Cambodia where "Pol Pot destroyed some three million people from 1975 to 1978. If any American had been in that area at that time it is very unlikely they would have survived that."

Barbie Trial Expected to Start in 1985

PARIS (AP) - The trial of Klaus Barbie, the Gestapo chief in Lyon during World War II, probably will take place during the coming year, according to Serge Klarsfeld, the French lawyer who represents the lamilies of Barbie's alleged victims.

"The investigating magistrate has almost finished taking testimony from witnesses and he should be ready with the indicament by mid-January," Mr. Klarsfeld said Monday at a news conference. "That means that even if there is an appeal, the trial should get under way by late spring or early fall 1985."

Mr. Barbie, 71, is imprisoned in Lyon awaiting trial on charges of crimes against burnanity. He was expelled from Bolivia and brought back to France in February 1983. He had lived in Bolivia since 1951.

Evidence Cited That 3- to 5-year-olds Gain by Instruction

By Edward B. Fiske

New York Times Service NEW YORK - Educators and political leaders in the United States are showing a growing interest in the instruction of 3- to 5year-olds in light of mounting evidence that it results in better-adjusted children and re-duced public spending over the long run.

Gordon M. Ambach, the commissioner of education in New York, and Gerald Tirozzi, his counterpart in Connecticut, recently endorsed the idea of starting formal schooling at the age of 4 rather than 6, the current practice.

The emerging focus on early childhood education is a product of several forces, including the cur-rent wave of education legislation in virtually every state. "Most of the focus thus far has been on high schools," said Michael Kirst, a professor of education at Stanford University. "There's a growing re-alization that you really have to start much earlier."

In addition, with more women entering the work force, the oumer of children already in preschool ating.

more than pay for themselves in economic terms.

The most definitive research has come from the Perry Pre-School Project in Ypsilanti, Michigan, which in the early 1960s began offering one to two years of educa-tion to 3-year-olds from impoverished backgrounds who had below-average IQs of 60 to 90.

Researchers from the High-Scope Edocational Research Foundation began tracking a group of 123 children who are now 19 years old. In a recent study, "Changed Lives," they reported that children in the preschool program graduated from high school and went on to iobs or further education at nearly twice the rate of children in a control group who did not take part. They also found fewer arrests,

The study said that even though the children were in the program only a year or so, they emerged with a sense of confidence and control of their environment that led to higher expectations and better per-formance once they had reached elementary school. "This better performance is visible to everyone: the child, the teacher, the parents and other children," it said.

Similar results have been reported elsewhere. A study of four Colorado school districts, for example, found that the costs of preschool programs were recouped within one year through reduced need for special education.

Enrollment in preschool programs has been growing consistently in the United States for more han a decade. According to the National Center for Education Statistics, the oumber of 3- and 4-yearolds in formal programs nearly doubled from 1970 to 1982, from 21 percent to 36 percent. Enroll-ment of 5-year-olds in preschool programs went from 69 percent to 83 percent in the same period. The major source of funds for programs for 3- and 4-year-olds is the U.S. government, which provides assistance in the form of direct aid to families, assistance to state or local governments, or tax credits. An estimated 4.4 million such children, or 63 percent, receive some form of U.S. assistance. The best-known program is Head Start, which has a budget of oearly $1 billion and serves 362,000 pre-kindergarten children. The question of how to organize the care and education of preschool children has frequently pitted those who run day-care centers against teachers and school administrators, both of whom have sought control

Dr. DeVries had said there was strong chance that the cause was a blood clot from the artificial heart or one of its valves. Dr. Lansing said another possible cause was a narrowing of the arteries in Mr. Schroeder's brain partly caused by his diabetes.

Berkeley Radicalism Takes Power in City Hall

BERKELEY, California — Mayor Eugene

"I'm not quite sure I understand what a Markist is," said Mr. Newport, his voice trailing. "I mean, I know people who are Markists." So, would he label himself a Markist?

The revolution in Berkeley is taking place at City Hall, where for the first time, leftist radicals, led by Mr. Newport, a self-described socialist, command a majority on the city commcil. While the rest of the United States was voting in November to send President Ronald Reagan back to the White House, residents here were electing the most leftist city council in Berkeley's history.

The new council, now controlled by members of a coalition called Berkeley Citizens Action, is further to the left than the councils of the mid-1970s, which debated whether the American flag should be saluted and the B-I bomber built and quibbled over whether manholes should be called person-boles.

But last week, in an interview with the new spaper Socialist Industry. Mr. Kozlov came out in defense of the abominable snowman. Since the 1960s, the Alpine Expedition Department has gathered

Mr. Kozlov argued that the snowman is a relict of Neanderthal man who was pushed up into the mountains by the mentally superior Homo sapiens.

Mr. Ranov disputed this argument last April. He said that, according to the theory of evolution, it would be impossible for a species to forget acquired skills such as

BEING KNOWN AS A NUMBER CAN BE A VERY PERSONAL THING

Look, for example, at the individual registration number on the back label of your bottle of Beefeater Gin. if it were JF 1222146, it would tell you that your Beeleater was distilled Thursday, January 7, 1982, under the supervision of Thomas Bowman, Master Stillman, and that the distillation was approved personally by Nir. Norman Burrough, a direct descendant of our founder, before it was allowed to leave the distillery.

Does it help to know all this? Yes. That number is a vital part of Beefeater's quality control. Because the number is Mr. Bowman's personal signature. And Mr Burrough's as well.

And any artist is at his best when he has to sign his work...

MILAN - After two blackouts in two months that sent millions of television viewers, including Prime Minister Bettino Crari, into quintessentially Italian emo-tional fits over the loss of favorites such as "Dallas," the world's most impudent tele-vision networks were formally back on the BRUSSELS - The European Community resumed long-stalled air last week. entry negotiations with Spain and Italy's audacious and sometimes bucca-Portugal on Monday after an EC neering independent television stations about 800 of them, amounting to more stations per capita than any country in the - have recently coalesced into a handful of ostensibly illegal and enormously profitable national networks whose popularity has vexed the courts.

Technically, the makeshift networks shouldn't exist. To protect the state radio and television monopoly, Italy long ago passed a law against electronic linkups between private broadcasting stations, as suring, the lawmakers thought, that the three sanctioned national TV oetworks would meet national needs and the locals would stay at home.

But there are no laws licensing broad-casters or controlling the use of frequen-cies. The absence of legal controls set off a rush to grab the attention of local audiences. Tawdry shows featuring housewife stripteases and explicit pornographic films that even many libertines found appalling ntillated viewers.

The local stations drew large audiences, and it wasn't long before a self-made construction millionaire from Milan, Silvio Berlusconi, conceived of a quasi-legal destate-controlled Radiotelevisione Italiana.

In less than three years after his start in 1980. Mr. Berlusconi extended a closedcurcuit system he had installed in one of his Milan building projects into two national networks by simply buying dozens of local stations and linking them by motorcycle couriers and videotapes. Although complying with the law by not establishing electronic links between his stations, he created the appearance of networks by scheduling simultaneous broadcasts throughout the country of the tapes be sent out from

Gambling on an advertising market that at the time had been tested only by the comfortable state-owned monopoly, Mr. Berlusconi spent millions for rights to American serials, including "Dallas," and in a year's time was in the black, with almost half the Italian prime-time audience watching his flagship Canale 5.

In all respects except its news broadcasts - too immediate to survive courier delivery - it was a octwork that had complied with the law hy outflanking it.

Whether it was wear and tear on the motorcycles that led him to step over the legal limit or simple audacity is uncertain. but the television entrepreneur jumped into electronic links by relay transmitters and cable last year, while still observing the prohibition against competing with the state monopoly for news.

Meanwhile, he bought two other private networks that had aped his methods: Italia Uno and Rete 4, which spread his message

The courts retaliated last month by shutting off his relay stations, depriving the nation of "Dallas," among others. Within three days, Prime Minister Craxi, whose daughter works for Canale 5, sent a government decree to Parliament putting the networks back on the air. But Parliament rejected Mr. Craxi's decree and the courts shut the networks again. But last Tuesday, it passed a second decree reopening the networks. So for the near future, at least, the private stations continue to operate virtually unregulated.

"Commercial television in Italy is the biggest illegal business in the country," boasted Carlo Frecero, a senior executive of Rete 4 before Mr. Berlusconi bought it. The state television monopoly runs three channels, strictly controlled by a parliamentary commission that was established at the behest of jealous press lords when television was introduced in Italy.

Among its most severe restrictions is an annual ceiling on advertising revenues, pegged to the ad revenues of the nation's newspapers and magazines. The ceiling was demanded by anxious publishers to prevent the state TV monopoly from blotting up a disproportionate share of available national advertising.

Thus in the current broadcasting year, state-controlled television has already sold all the advertising time the governing par-liamentary commission will permit, roughly $300 million worth. For the same period, Mr. Beriusconi projects ad revenues of about $420 million on his networks, more than 10 times his 1981 ad sales. Mr. Berinscon's networks: capture 10,6 million of Italy's viewer and ence of roughly 27 million, up from the two million who watched Canale 5 in 1981. Meanwhile, the main state-approved charnel's audience has declined slightly. Together, the approved Channels ! and 2: drew an average audience of 10.8 million.

Network executives are dismayed but not defeated by the success of Mr. Berlusconi and other private operators.

"With our third channel, we still have a little more than 50 percent of the total audience," said the Radiotelevisione Italiana assistant general manager, Gianniero Gamaleri, in the state-run network's Rome executive offices. "That's a lot better than the British Broadcasting Corp. did when the British approved private television." But Mr. Gamaleri complained bitterly about Parliament's failure to enact last governing the state broadcasting network's

Keep Those Economists

The suggestion that President Reagan may ask Congress to close down the Council of Economic Advisers, as part of his program of expenditure cuts, ranks as the supreme irony of the economic year. The council was foremost in urging strong action to reduce the budget deficit at a time when the president and his secretary of the Treasury were still arguing either that the deficit did not matter or that, if it did, it would go away of itself as the economy grew.

Economists are not always right, and they can be a nuisance. Keynes said they should regard themselves as dentists — available for consultation on request, but aware that economics isn't everything in political life.
It is arguable that Martin Feldstein, when he was chairman of the CEA, sometimes overstepped the mark in public advice to the administration he served. We would argue instead that he showed courage in combating an economie illiteracy that put sustained prosperity in America and the world at stake - very much as David Stockman of the Office of Management and Budget did. Nobody seems to want to close down the OMB.

Before throwing away the baby with the bathwater. Washington should reflect on the role the council bas played, with distinction, under Republican and Democratic administrations alike. The changes that would have to be made if the CEA were given the coup de grace should also be considered. And notice might be taken of the esteem in which the council is held outside America.

The CEA is an institution particularly appropriate to a country that prides itself on checks and balances in government. Unlike Britain, France or Sweden, to name but a few, America bas not built up its Treasury Department as a determining, centralizing voice in economic decision-making. The Treasury is heavily engaged in tax gathering and bond selling, and this is not likely to change fast. Somebody has to help balance, for example, the Treasury's desire to sell debt cheap with the Fed's desire not to monetize the deficit. And somebody has to help the president put the sectional wishes of specialized departments such as Commerce, Agriculture and Labor into perspective.

Centrally placed in the executive, the CEA occupies an independent position; it serves no sectional interest. That makes it the obvious body to advise on the overall economie situation into which specific programs have to be fitted. If the White House is to make good economic policy, it has to have sound, unbiased economie analysis and forecasts that reflect probability rather than aspiration. This is what the small staff of the council has provided under a succession of chairmen. The council has thrived on smallness and freedom from procedural niceties. Its members bring their expertise to Washington briefly. By the time they go home, experience has broadened that expertise.

No machinery of government is sacrosanct, but rather than demolish the CEA and try to rebuild its functions elsewhere, it would be better to restore what used to call the "quadriad" to its former efficiency: the peer relationship between the Treasury, the OMB, the CEA and the Federal Reserve. The American economy has substantive problems. This is hardly the time to break up a system that has served the economy well.

INTERNATIONAL HERALD TRIBUNE

Terrorism: International Lynch Law Isn't the Answer

By George Ball

N EW YORK — In three recent speeches, Secretary of State George Shultz has per-mitted his obsession with terrorism to distort his normally judicious view of the world. Not only should the United States retaliate with force against terrorist violence, Mr. Shultz insists; it should not hold back from launching pre-emptive strikes to thwart threatened terrorist attacks merely because such strikes might entail some innocent civilian casualties.

For guidance, be recommends looking to Israel as "a model of how a nation should approach the dilemma of trying to balance law nd justice with self-preservation."

That last comment is singularly revealing because Israel exemplifies not balance but ex-cess. Since it is a small, insecure country sur-rounded by enemies, self-preservation is its dominant imperative. So it is hardly surprising that one reads almost weekly of a bombing attack on some Arab village aimed at destroying a "PLO beadquarters" or a "terrorist base."

No doubt such attacks have had some deterrent effect, but they have also, as statistics show, killed bundreds of men, women and children guilty of no offense other than living in a target area. In 1981, for example, when Israel bombed a Beirut apartment house thought to contain a PLO beadquarters, it is reported to have killed as many as 300 civilians only to discover that the PLO leaders had already left.

Because the United States, by contrast, is a huge nation living in secure borders and obli-gated by its leadership role to uphold inter-national standards, its problems are sharply different in nature and dimension. If we need a model, we might more appropriately turn to Britain, which, while suffering terrorist afflic-tions, has kept faith with humane principles and practices that are our common heritage. Had the British followed the Israeli pattern, they might have answered the Irisb Republican Army's bombing of the Grand Hotel in Brighperformance in Lebanon, they might have at-tacked Dublin because some IRA members were thought to be hiding there.

If we are to cope effectively with terror, we must understand its complexities. Apart from the anarchist madness practiced by the BaaderMeinhof gang and the Red Brigades, which only marginally touched America, two types of terrorism should principally concern us.

The first, directed toward achieving a political aim, is sometimes effective. Four decades

Together we would threaten economic sanctions against countries that aid terrorists.

ago, Irgun and the Stern Gang successfully used terror to belp persuade Britain to relinquish its Palestine mandate, thus hastening the creation of Israel. But the PLO has accomplished nothing by terrorism. In spite of all its violence, the 900,000 Palestinians dispersed throughout the Arab world have regained not one acre of the land from which they were displaced. Instead, even though the PLO continues its activities despite Israeli counterattacks, its outrages and doctrinal rigidity have critically damaged the Palestinian cause and strengthened opponents of negotiation.

Not that PLO violence poses any direct threat to America. It is sharply focused on Israel. America's recent casualties have almost all resulted from a second, different kind of against modern Western values symbolized by America. In their lunatic fervor, they have so far killed more than 350 Americans.

Yet since Western logic is missing from their calculus, reprisals have little value. In fact, killing fanatics may only inflame their brethren to seek similar martyrdom. Such passion is hard for Westerners to understand.

Still, proper diagnosis is essential. American casualties have not resulted, as Mr. Shultz suggests, because "the technology of security has been outstripped by the technology of murder."

Car bombs and suicidal use of explosive-laden trucks shows little advance over the exploding borse-drawn carriage used in an anarchist-at-tack in Wall Street 60 years ago.

We also confuse the issue when we think of today's political and religious terrorism as pe-culiar to our age. In the 19th century, anarchists moved down princes and potentates all over Europe with bombs and gunfire. Not only the 12th century Assassins but other fanatics have practiced murder in the name of religion.

What distinguishes our predicament is the complicity of renegade governments such as those of Libya and Iran. That radically affects our approach to the problem, for, although the United States cannot use military force against an offending government without committing an act of war, it should be able, through collec-tive action with like-minded nations, to use economic and political pressures unavailable in dealing with freewheeling terrorists.

What the situation urgently demands is that Mr. Shultz and his colleagues concentrate on organizing concerted measures with allies. Acting collectively, we would threaten — and it necessary apply — economic sanctions against countries giving aid and comfort to terrorist. All members of such a concert of nations make agree to break diplomatic relations with — and thus impose political isolation on — any me-criment that violated the embassies or interfered with diplomatic personnel of any parties pating nation, or condened such violations

A suggestion in Beijing that some of Marx's deas are not relevant a century later has caught attention around the world. In the West answer them that the reformers suggest that

FROM OUR DEC. 18 PAGES, 75 AND 50 YEARS AGO

Thanks to a heedless decision by the Reagan administration, millions of needy people in the developing world will be denied family planning aid. This will occur because the U.S. Agency for International Development, under strong pressure from the White House, has cut off funds to the International Planned Parenthood Federation, the largest voluntary family planning organization in the world.

The decision to deny the $17 million earmarked in this year's budget has no basis in any change in the law governing population aid. For 11 years that law has forbidden the use of U.S. aid for abortions. The IPPF insists that it has scrupulously complied. It performs no abortions and does not advocate abortion as a method of birth control. In distributing aid to independent family planning associa-tions, it is careful to warn that the U.S. allocation must not be used for abortions. Less than I percent of all the money flowing through the IPPF is used for abortion-related services.

Moreover, the Reagan administration does not claim that the IPPF has violated the antiabortion strictures. It simply decided last summer to reinterpret the law to please a group of extremists who wanted to change the pattern of family planning aid to developing countries. The new interpretation was specifically rejected by the House of Representatives in language incorporated into the appropriation bili-passed by both bouses this fall. It bolds that no money can be given to the IPPF if any of that money flows to foreign family planning agen-cies that, using other sources of money, pro-vide abortion-related services.

Essentially this means that the United States, which is only one of 27 donor nations, is trying to dictate family planning policies for all 119 member nations. Like the United States, many donor and recipient countries have legalized abortion. Adhering to a policy that would effectively prevent these sovereign countries from establishing rules for their own national organizations puts the IPPF - and the United States - in an untenable position. Losing the American quarter-plus of its fi-nancing will mean that the IPPF—the single or major source of family planning aid to many countries—will have to cancel or sharply trim family planning and other public health programs in some of the poorest countries of Africa, Asia and Central and South America. Many desperately poor women will resort to self-inflicted or illegal abortions, which are still major birth control methods in the less-developed world. This avoidable suffering will be attributable in large part to this decision,

A Bipartisan Rescue of the Loopholes

WOLDWING TON W came early to Washington for the lobbyists who oppose the Treasury Department's tax reform plan. The slush fund to drown this reform must be wider and deeper than the Potomac, By all accounts, the effort seems to be succeeding.

There are two remarkable things about the Treasury plan: first, bow it managed to come out of a Republican administration financed and re-elected with the help of the loophole institutions that favor the tax system as it is; second, wby the Treasury's proposals got so little support from the Democrats, who were howling all through the election campaign, with good reason, about the "unfairness" and even the "corruption" of the present tax code but who complain about the chance for reform when they get it. You have to go back a while to try to figure out who is being fair and honest about tax reform. In his 1984 State of the Union address, President Reagan called on Treasury Secretary Donald Regan to draft a new tax code under which "all taxpayers, big and small, are treated more fairly." "Let us go forward," the president said, with a "historic reform for fairness, simplicity and incentives for growth."

The Democratic electrics plate.

The Democrats' election plat-form had the same idea: "The present system is unfair, complex, and encourages people to use a wide range of loopholes to avoid paying their fair share of taxes." Enter Mr. Regan, a thoughtful guy beyond personal ambition who knows where home is and does not need Washington. He takes the president's assignment seriously and comes up with a reform plan.

By James Reston

You might have expected, given the alarming budget and trade deficits, that this invitation to think about tax reform would get at least a fair hearing and an enthusiastic reaction from the president and the Democratic leaders. Instead it got a medium "hello, wait-and-see" reacnon from the president, and a negative reaction from the liberal Democrats and the liberal press.

Only The New Republic came forward, in its old liberal tradition. and congratulated this most conservative administration: "The Reagan administration's Treasury Department, of all institutions, produced a tax reform proposal that would transform the nation's chaotic, complicated revenue-raising system into something fair, simple, progressive, efficient and encouraging to economie growth." Everybody else had a complaint, and many had good points to make for special interests. The governors didn't like it because the Regan plan would eliminate the present deduction for state and local taxes. The AFL-CIO's leaders didn't like it because it would tax unemploy-ment benefits. The stockbrokers didn't like it because it would tax position came from corporate interest groups — and no wonder. According to Citizens for Tax Justice, 128 of the 250 most profitable American corporations paid no taxes at all, or received rebates, in at least one of the first three Reagan years, despite total profits of $56.7 billion. Under the present system, General Electric reported $6.5 billion in pretax profits, but claimed refunds of $283 million, The New Republic estimates.

It is odd, what seems to be going on here. Nobody sounds sure that his arguments of the past were right. The president appeals for arms control with the Russians, which used to be the Democratic Party's pitch. Barry Goldwater wants to give up the MX missile, which be once hoped would be the backbone of America's defense. Secretary of State George Shultz is proclaiming the importance of military power and Defense Serretary Caspar Weinberger is warning of its dangers without the cautious principles of diplomatic negotiations.

Maybe we are getting some-where. The leaders of both parties are starting to question the out-rageous arguments of the presidential campaign — except for the tax question. All Secretary Regan is saying is that the system should be examined in light of the national interest, but his reforms are being nibbled to death not only by the far cats but also by the Democrats.

Middle East: Peace Talk Blocks the Peace Process

By Robert E. Hunter

W said it would be easy to make peace between Israel and its Arab neighbors. But in recent weeks the prospects have receded even further. in the guise of steps by Jordan and Egypt that their leaders represent as efforts to advance the peace process.

In Amman, King Hussein bosted a meeting of the Palestine National Council — roughly the parliament-in-exile of the part of the Palestine Liberation Organization still controlled by Yasser Arafat after his savaging last year by Syria, King Hussein took the bold step of appealing to the PLO to join the peace process, on the basis of Security Council Res-olution 242. This is the document under whose aeps all peace diplomacy has been conducted for 17 years, but that is still rejected by the PLO as inadequate for Palestinian interests.

Yet the king promptly offset his boldness by making three other pro-posals. An international peace conference, including the Soviet Union. should be convened under UN anspices. The PLO should participate fully in it and all other diplomacy. The right of Palestinians to selfdetermination should be recognized. Each proposal undercuts the Camp

David accords so painstakingly cobbled together six years ago. The United States opposes an international conference as letting Moscow get its camel's nose under the tent of Middle East diplomacy. More insistently, Israel opposes any direct negotiations with the PLO, which rejects Israel's right to exist. And Jerusalem further opposes the innocuous-sounding but politically explosive concept of Palesunian selfdetermination - a code phrase universally understood to mean an independent Palestinian state carved out of the West Bank and Gaza. Whether right or not, Israel sees this as the ultimate threat to its security, and hence a total impediment to peace. In Cairo, President Hosni Mubarak supported King Hussein's initiative after a meeting with him. This was not, the Egyptians averred, a rejection of Camp David but an "interpretation" of it. Yet, by whatever name, the alliance of Jordan and Egypt around ideas long obnoxious to Israel has sent regional diplomacy off in directions sure to prove sterile. Indeed, Israel's Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir promptly declared Arab support for the PLO and peace with Israel to be incompatible.

Both Arab leaders have important motives that go beyond their declared concern to make peace possible. King Hussein recognizes the need to create some counterweight to Syria, still riding high in the Arab world after the

WASHINGTON — Nobody ever Lebanon war and bungled U.S. diplomacy. By reaching out to Mr. Arafat's wing of the PLO, the king has gained some credit on the West Bank, which he wants to see affiliated with Jordan. By proposing an international conference at variance with Camp David, he has adopted one Syrian theme, thus somewhat muting his challenge to Damascus. Meanwhile, Mr. Mubarak is anxious to see Egypt readmitted to the Arab fold. Earlier this fall Jordan helped by restoring diplomatic rela-tions with Egypt, severed when Anwar Sadat journeyed to Jerusalem in 1977. By embracing a concept of peacemaking that is heavily weighted toward Palestinian interests (and that also bypasses Camp David), Mr. Mu-barak strengthens his claim to be reaccepted by other Arab states. And both King Hussein and Mr. Mubárak hope that Iraq will join their fledgling axis against Syria, now that Baghdad and Washington have made up. There are two countervailing developments. Syria's ability to veto any Arab attempt to make peace with Israel may, over time, be eroded by the gradual coalescence of moderate Arab states. And the terms in which recent regional diplomacy is being expressed make the practicalities of acemaking much harder. By rejecting King Hussein's call to endorse Resolution 242, the Arafat wing of the PLO has again chosen the least common denominator of unrealism and recalcitrance regarding Israel's legitimate interests.

Arab positions that are supposedly designed to show flexibility and imagination in fact ensure that Israel will not be moved. Anyway, Israel is poorly placed to take initiatives. Strapped by byper-inflation, still pinned down in Lebanon and governed by a curious arrangement that provides for an automatic change in power and political purpose in 1986, Israel is in no temper for ambitious adventures in diplomacy. The Arab-

Israeli dialogue of the deaf continues. This impasse illustrates the risks in U.S. abstention from deep involvement in Arab-Israeli peacemaking, during which regional states are tempted to play unhelpful games. U.S. abstention has gone on for some time. Even the Reagan plan of 1982 has received no more than lip service in Washington. Thus, as the administration's top man for the Middle East, Assistant Secretary of State Richard Murphy, pursues a quiet diplomatic trip to the region, he does not go to advance new U.S. peacemaking ideas — ideas not yet defined in Washington.

Mr. Murphy must first try to rein in a regional diplomatic process that points to a dead end. Otherwise, even a vigorous new U.S. commitment to Middle East peacemaking could be too little, too late - and herald another period of the inaction that always bodes ill for the Middle East.

N EW YORK — The Reagan administration faces a great opportunity to repair its reputation in Latin America. It could identify itself with the movement toward democracy that is sweeping the hemisphere by making clear that it supports the Chilean people in their desire to rid themselves of the dictatorship of General Augusto Pinochet Regrettably, Washington seems intent instead on propping up the Pinochet regime. The Reagan administration has made a few comments supporting "a transition to democracy" and criticizing such measures as censorship, but these remarks have been all too mildly stated.

Moreover, they are regularly cou-pled with denunciations of terrorist violence by "the nondemocratic left" in Chile, as if anti-government violence had reached the level nt which it should be equated with the terrorism practiced by the government.

That is nonsense. In fact there is no guerrilla movement in Chile. There is no history of guerrilla movements. and the opposition to General Pinochet is overwhelmingly peaceful, A handful of extremists calling themselves the Manuel Rodriguez Front have set off some explosions, but this hardly justifies the total suppression of liberty by the Pinochet regime. The Reagan administration further By Aryeh Neier chet by backing hundreds of millions of dollars in loans to Chile by the Inter-American Development Bank. This support clearly violates U.S. law prohibiting the United States from voting for loans to countries that engage in a "consistent pattern of gross violations of human rights."

The law specifies that gross violaout charges, or other flagrant denials of life, liberty and the security of the law intended to apply specifically to Chile today, it would be difficult to that the leaders of that struggle would tions include "torture or cruel, inhumane or degrading treatment or punishment, prolonged detention withperson." If Congress were drafting a find language that would more explicitly ban support for the loans that the administration is backing.

The Reagan administration has let it be known that it is concerned that Chile will become "another Nicaragua." To anyone even slightly familiar with the two countries, the analogy is mind-boggling. Nicaragua had no democratic tradition before the Sandinist revolution. It is predominantly a country of poor peasants, many of whom were illiterate - and may still be, despite the vaunted Sandinist literacy program. Nicaraguans rid themselves of the Somoza dynasty by protracted armed struggle. The signals its support for General Pino-process ensured, among other things.

take power after the revolution. In contrast, Chile had a long democratic tradition — until it was violently interrupted by General Pinochet's coup in 1973. It is predominantly a middle-class country and its citizens hold middle-class values. There is no prospect that the Pinochet government will be overthrown by armed struggle, both because there is no guerrilla movement and because the Chilean armed forces are far too formidable to encounter much difficulty if such a movement were to develop. The reason why the Reagan administration worries about "another Nicaragua" is that it fears that Communists would do well in democratic elections — perhaps well enough so that, in coalition with other parties, they could take part in a post-Pinochet government. Is this at all likely? It is hard to say. Political expression in Chile has been so dampened during the past 11 years that any predictions about electoral strength can only be wildly speculative,

The Reagan administration missed the opportunity to identify itself with the movement toward democracy in both Argentina and Uruguay. Now. lacking assurances about the outcome of elections in Chile, Washington is missing the opportunity to ally ward democracy in that country. Latin America is going democratic. But unless the Reagan administra-tion seizes the chance to identify itself with the movement by the Chilean people to oust General Pinochet, few in Latin America will give it credit for encouraging democracy. Nor will it deserve eredit.

The Agnellis have a collection of rare Russian Imperial plates, whose colors (gold, hlack and green) tie in with the wallpaper, an oldie from the 1930s discovered in Milan. The Matisse colors, black, red and white, dictated the living room decor, which includes black parquet covered with rough kilim rugs, plush red velvet settees and hlack-and-white striped walls. Singers Shine in 'Iolanta,' 'Tosca' in Paris tional Herald Tribune D ARIS — Ignoring almost completely current emphasis oo staging and scenery, the most recent major events on the Parisian operatic calendar subscribed enthusiastically, and often gloriously, to the voices-first theory - applying it to two widely differing works that date from within a decade of one another.

In addition, one of them was a total novelty almost anywhere outside Russia — Tchaikovsky's final opera, "Iolanta," passionately advocated by Mstislav Rostropovich, who conducted a pair of concert performances at the Salle Pleyel with a formidable cert headed by with a formidable cast headed by Galina Vishnevskaya in the title part and Nicolai Gedda in the princinal tenor role.

"lolanta," a one-act work almost two hours long, was commissioned to accompany "The Noteracker," and the two had their world pre-mieres in 1892 on the same program at St. Petersburg's Maryinsky

Why "Nutcracker" should have become the dance world's favorite holiday ballet while "lolanta" fell almost entirely out of sight is not explicable on purely musical grounds. Tchaikovsky responded to its fairy-tale story with music in his richest mature vein - oot as specifically Russian as, say, "Eu-gene Onegin," not as relentlessly cote as much of "Nuteracker" and with cone of the pessimism of the almost contemporary Symphony No. 6. Some of the music is a bit faceless, but there are many surprising and effective touches, start-ing with a kind of wind screnade that serves as a prelude.

The story tells of a blind princess whose royal father has protected her from the awareness that she has any disability. She does oot know what "sight," "light" or the names of colors mean. A Moorish doctor engaged to cure her tells the king that the two necessary conditions are that she realize her condition and that she wish to be cured. Through love for the man who unwittingly makes her aware of the beauties of sight, this is achieved; an almost Freudian cautionary

The Maryinsky must have been richly endowed with fine voices in 1892, for six of the ten roles are substantial and vocally demanding indeed, and they were cast to the hilt in Paris (not least, perhaps, because these concerts will eventually appear as a recording on the adventurous Erato label).

EGARDLESS of the technical and fundamental supplydemand factors commonly cited for moving futures prices, the three main influences are the interactions between traders, the cash price of the underlying com-

Of these three key factors, traders can have instant knowledge of changing cash values and economic news, thanks to today's electronic information systems. Only the market's psychological mood has, and will always be, an unfathomable mystery.

This is why, for better or worse, most individual traders as well as institutional hedgers now use computerized technical trading systems, whether they are basically guided by charts or fundamentals," he added. Henry Maringer, an internationally respected futures market analyst who heads a New York consulting firm bearing his name, agreed. "No money manager can watch and, more important, interpret all the data that determine prices today," he said, "especially when the torrent of data feeds on itself. In the old days, most of us watched one or two markets; now we have to look at 20 or 30 markets." One reason Mr. Maringer can do this for his clients, he added, was that he uses, among other sources, the oldest computerized technical trading system, Comdata. It is available to subscribers of the Telerate data network, whose little black video boxes are a fixture on most brokers' desks,

"The Comdata system not only has the capacity to relate the changes that affect all markets quickly, but is also the fastest early warning system of changes in market trends," Mr. Maringer said.

NOMDATA, which is the optional service most requested by Telerate subscribers, is furnished by the Technical Data Corp., a Boston investment advisory service.

Jeffrey P. Parker, Technical Data's president, noted that his company did not develop Comdata. "The Comdata system is essentially based on the oldest commodity technical price trend system the futures market has, Commodex," he explained. "All we did was make some adjustments to accommodate the new financial futures markets. When Commodex was developed 25 years ago, it was primarily directed toward the soft commodity, like farm products, and a few metals and other nonfarm raw

In seeking a system that would relate the perplexing interde-pendence of the commodity and financial instrument futures markets, Mr. Parker said, "we found that Commodex pulls all this data together beautifully and has an uncanny way of signaling basic changes in price trends of both the old and newer

Philip Gotthelf, president of Commodex Systems Corp. in New York, also modestly deflected praise for his system's high degree of accuracy and acceptance by the futures trade. "All I did was add some refinements to a system that has been published by my father for 25 years," he said His father, Edward, a prominent figure in the futures industry, also declined authorship, saying: "I was formerly in the advertising business and acquired the basic Commodex system from a client in settlement of his outstanding bills. U.S. Nears Accord On Steel

Some Exporters Agree to Curbs

By Clyde H. Farnsworth New York Times Service
WASHINGTON — The United States is close to agreement with steel-exporting nations on a system of quotas to curb their U.S. shipments to less than 20 percent of the domestic market. The arrangements have been ne-gotiated over the last three months under a presidential steel plan announced Sept. 18 - a plan undertaken to quell election-year pressures from the domestic industry and to deflect moves in Congress for even tighter controls. "We are making considerable progress with a number of countries on steel," said David F. Demarest, spokesman for U.S. Trade Representative William E. Brock, who has managed the negotiations. Under the plan announced in September, President Ronald Reagan set a deadline that falls Tues-day to reach agreements that would limit finished-steel imports to 18.5 percent of the market. So far this year, imports have averaged 26 percent of U.S. consumption.

Among those that would be affected by the quotas are some Latin American debtor countries, such as Brazil, Venezuela and Argentina, which use their steel mills as a means of earning scarce foreign exchange. Other nations involved include Spain, Japan, Australia, South Africa and Mexico. Consumer interests warn that the restraints will lead to higher prices on a myriad of products. Japan, one of the two biggest suppliers to the U.S. market, agreed early this month to limit shipments to 5.8 percent of the U.S. market, below their average pene-tration of 6.3 percent in recent years. The EC, the other major supplier, had already agreed to limit most exports two years ago.

Small Airlines Find Niche in Europe

By Ronald Katz

tional Herald Tribune PARIS — Manx Airways, Abacus Air and Muk Air are scarcely names that ring in the minds of most air travelers, even in Western Europe, where some 80 regional or commuter airlines operate. Often based in little known airports such as Castle Donington, Leicestershire, in Britain, or Dortmund, West Germany, and using diminutive turbo-prop aircraft, such as the Fairchild Metroliner (18 seats) or the Fokker F-27 (44 seats). Europe's regional airlines are assuming an increasingly visible role in European air transport.

The smaller carriers do not fit into neat categories. Some, like West Germany's Directair, based in West Berlin, have less than 50 employees, including pilots; others, like Switzerland's Crossair. have several hundred. The size and composition of their fleets also varies. Directair has a single Fair-child Metroliner III; West Germany's DLT owns eight aircraft and charters four others.

Structurally, the small carriers present a diversity of management styles. DLT is 26-percent owned by Deutsche Lufthansa AG; others, such as Birmingham Executive Airways, in the British Mid-lands, are completely independent. Still others are hybrids, such as Brit Air in France, which describes itself as "semi-public" because it has a long-term accord with Air Inter, which is stateowned, and operates two routes for the larger carrier.

Although virtually all these small airlines use propeller-driven turbo props and fly to places that larger airlines do not serve, their functions differ. Scotland's Loganair operates largely as a social service to the Orkney and Shetland Islands; West Germany's DLT is a feeder to Lufthansa's major hab cities and advertises itself as a "matter to bub cities and advertises itself as a "partner to Lufthansa." Birmingham Executive operates regular point-to-point services, such as those from Birmingham, England, to Milan - "Fasta to Pasta," the ads say — and targets the upmarket business traveler with amenities including a free bar, quality wines, and in-flight stereo. Some, like Switzerland's ALAG, operate only during holiday

Whatever their role, all small carriers see themselves as offering distinct advantages over large carriers. They emphasize that they offer direct service between points only accessible, for reasons of thin traffic or limited airport facilities, to small-

Japan: New Play for U.S. Data Firms

BOSTON - American companies are eagerly studying the oppor-tunities presented by legislation that is expected to end Japan's monopoly on its telecommunications industry.

But industry analysts in the United States said they doubted that American companies could make any major inroads in the Japanese telecommunications business for several years. They pointed to Japan's rightly controlled distribu-tion system and the tendency of the Japanese to buy domestically pro-duced goods.

There has been a growing consensus in Japan that the current telecommunications system is over-regulated and outmoded, and legislation to restructure the industry was approved last week by a key committee in the Japanese Diet, or parliament. The legislation is virtually certain to become law, possibly in votes as early as Tuesday or

The company said that with the world economy expanding, the out-look for the group is favorable, and it said restructuring efforts will further improve earnings.

World group third-party sales in 1983-84 rose 14 percent, to 32.4 billion DM, from 28.4 billion DM the previous year, Thyssen said. Non-specialty steel sales, at 10,3 billion DM, were 16 percent higher than the 1982-83 level of 8.9 billion DM, while specialty steel sales rose 23 percent, to 3.5 billion DM from 2.8 billion DM. In announcing the omission of a dividend, the managing board said its prime goal was to consolidate the group. Last year's omission of a dividend was the first since 1956.

ONLY THE PUREST GOLD HAS

Over 3000 years ago, the ancient Egyptians immortalized their King Tutankhamen in the purest of gold. Even then they knew that pure gold would have everlasting value. And that is still true today. Whoever invests in gold should also choose its purest form.

Canada's Maple Leaf, for example, is struck with the purest gold that you can buy today. It contains no base metals and is the only coin available at banks with a purity of 999.9/1000 fice gold - guaranteed by the Canadian

What does that mean for you? In contrast to ordinary gold coins which are 22-carat gold, you get the purity of 24-carat gold for your money with Maple Leaf. And, a high degree of assurance that you can trade it easily anytime, anywhere in the world.

Therefore, prudent investors can follow the example of the ancient Egyptians. Whoever wants to acquire longterm value should choose gold of the highest purity. And today, that is the 999,91000 of the Canadian Maple Leaf - a purity for which there is no

Small Airlines Find Niche Among the Giants in Travel Market

traffic jams. Direct flights can also be time and money savers. The drive along Alpine roads between Zurieb and Lugano, Switzerland, can take five to six hours. Crossair flies there in

Other industry observers sense a growing revolt of travelers against the impersonality of flying jumbo jets to large, interchangeable airports. "People are getting tired of being processed, of being pushed around," says Robert Bonhoff, secretary-general of the European Re-gional Airlines Organization, which represents several small carriers' interests. "The small carriers bring a human scale and a high level of personal service back to air travel." These qualities are paying off for some of the carriers, Crossair's revenue has risen from 37 million Swiss francs ($14.5 million at current rates) in 1982 to about 60 million francs in 1984. Birmingham Executive, created in 1981, expects

The decision followed a U.S. review of the accord prompted by the EC's sale of butter to the Soviet Union at prices below the mini-mum of $1,200 a ton set by the agreement, Mr. Murphy said.

The EC is believed to have sold more than 100,000 tons of surplus butter to the Soviet Union in late November and early December, trade sources said.

The EC sale to the Sovie any computer can pick up. It's just a matter of when the computers Union, in essence, made the dairy arrangement totally oull and void, Mr. Murpby said.

The title character and protagonist of the novel is, in spite of his name, a Russian emigre painter, seen by his biographical narrator —an massuming, though not unimaginative, medi-eval scholar — as larger than life, or at least larger than most humans, and therefore entirely forgivable in all his deceptions, extravagances and excesses. And Ashby is certainly conceived as excessive: a compulsive charmer, an irresistible womanizer and a kind of con man, who invents facts and reinvents his life constantly - but who can play the game so well only because he can see through it to a more essential reality. "We are all pretending, my dear boy," he tells his younger friend and foture chronicler. "That is what is known as reality. The important thing is to maintain 8

Ashby's redeeming feature is that he cannot pretend to the end. For a while, he paints lush and realistic nudes, because they bring in a lot of money. But his conscience is jogged by a fellow emigre artist, and his canvases become more abstract and spiritual, searching no longer for the model's body, but for her soul —and for that of the world. For a while, also, he allows himself to be married to an excessively rich and influential woman (though only after bedding down ber daughter, who is understandably provoked into trying to shoot him in revenge), but he cannot stand to have his life even so luxuriously arranged, and summons his ever-faithful Horatio to rescue him from his gilded cage. And, in a final gesture of spiritual grandstanding and political conscience, be makes a pilgrimage to the shrine of Santiago de

Compostela just as the Spanish Civil War begins, and the world to which he belongs begins

"Ashby" is essentially a one-character oovel, though around this central figure. Valency sketches some rather charming vigneties and scenes which, with winsomeness and understated wit, suggest the atmosphere of a still-innocent and romantie boliemia. Most of the novel takes place in a Greenwich Village unaffected by the Depression and populated by a small cast of characters given to lots of love-

over his 21-year-old challenger, Gary Kasparov, and needs but Gary Kasparov, and needs but one more victory to retain his championship. Draws do not count, but Karpov prefers to save his winning attempts for the games in which he plays White and has the slight advantage of the first move.

This was the same variation of the Petrov Defense as in Game 28 until Kasparov related to the part of the petrov Defense as in Game 28 until Kasparov related to the part of the petrov Defense as in Game 28 until Kasparov related to the part of the petrov Defense as in Game 28 until Kasparov related to the part of the petrov Defense as in Game 28 until Kasparov related to the part of the petrov Defense as in Game 28 until Kasparov related to the players agreed to the draw.

of his speculations can be quite amusing. The age of the garter belt has come to an end the pronounces at one point. "A major phenome non. Surely you are aware?" - thereupon launching into a lecture on the causelyang changes of mores and relations between the sexes implied by this "most significant sign of the times. But it is difficult to know what to make of this rather haphazard constellation of figures and incidents. Is the novel simply a portrait of an artist in his time, perhaps loosely based a an actual painter, such as John Graham; a Russian emigre who also went through traditional and avant-garde phases? Or is it a novel of a time represented through an artist sensitive to its moods and vibrations? The latter interpretation is suggested through the infusion of political scenes and discussions, which intrude

Ashby, of course, outtalks them all, and some

into the rather confined milieu of the novel. Ashby may be Russian not only because of what the narrator calls "the Russian vogue" of the time, but also because the political issues of the 30's were to such a large extent defined by what was happening in the Soviet Union. There's an all-American strike disrupted by the police, which Ashby and his friends watch for a while, before linally deciding to go to dinner, and there is, of course, the rising drum roll of the Spanish Civil War, which causes much debate, though its significance remains, al that early stage, quite ungraspable.

In a sense, Valency is perceptive about the relationship of personal lives to such events at least before the events become overwhelming enough to make a tangible impact on individual fates. As the narrator follows Ashby into Spain, he turns the turnoil and the edge of danger in the air into a backdrop for his own erotic adventures. The romance of a revolution quickly becomes - as when hasn't it, for those not about to die? - the romance of seduction.

But even in such scenes, Valency does not refrain from going over the edge-of clobe. "Think," William says to a young woman he has accidentally met on the road, "years from now when you're safely married to your bank manager, with your four lovely children crawling about your spotless kitchen linoleum, and the mortgage money safely deposited in the Royal Bank of Liverpool, you'll still be won-dering how it would have been if you had given way to a generous impulse that evening long ago in Pamplona on the eve of the Civil War."

The hallmark of novelistic nostalgia is the stylistic soft focus in which all rough edges, all tension, all conflict - the fresh air of the unexpected, or the effort to understand wint really took place - are smoothed over in the misty haze of delicious and cozy impressions. In this oovel, nothing can happen, because everything has already happened.

A British opposition politician, Gerald Kanfman, says Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher is "Mrs. Scrooge" for charging taxes on "Do They Know It's Christmas?" the top-selling pop record whose pro-ceeds are intended to aid Ethiopian famine victims. "Mean-minded Margaret must be made to change her mind," Kaufmann, the Labor Party's chief spokesman for domes-tic affairs, said after Thatcher refused to exempt the record from Britain's 15-percent value-added tax. The record, made by some of rock music's biggest stars performing as a group called Band Aid, was recorded Nov. 25. It is one of the fastest-selling records in history. A group of legislators urged the Conservative Party government to give a sum equivalent to the taxes collected on the records to Ethiopian relief aid. In a letter to the Labor Party leader, Neil Kinnock, Thatcher rejected the idea, saying it would not be fair to other worthy groups whose fund-raising efforts are sub-

Solidifying the Budget

"Cap, I don't want to drop the defense hudget any more than you do. But Congress woo't give us our cuts in human services if we don't come up with some slashes in Pentagon spending. Just throw $10 bil-lion into the deficit pot to show good faith. You'll never miss it, and then we can justify doing away with all the school lunch programs."
"Mr. President, it's true I could possibly find $10 billion stuck away somewhere that I don't oeed. But if I agreed to give it back I'd be setting a precedent. I don't want Congress coming to me every time Weinberger said, "I'll stand. It's they're looking for a few bucks to save a day-care program."

"I'm aware you're an easy target for the bleeding hearts. Cap. But you have to understand that if you don't come up with ways of trimming the defense budget, Congress will. We could lose the MX missile, the B-1 and the Star Wars program. Tell me this: If you won't go for cuts, will you go for a freeze?"
"A freeze of what?"

"Will you stay with what you've got now for a year?"

"I can't do that, Mr. President. Do you know what hammers and screwdrivers cost these days? The most I can agree to is an 11-percent increase over last year, and I'm do-ing this without checking with the Joint Chiefs of Staff,"

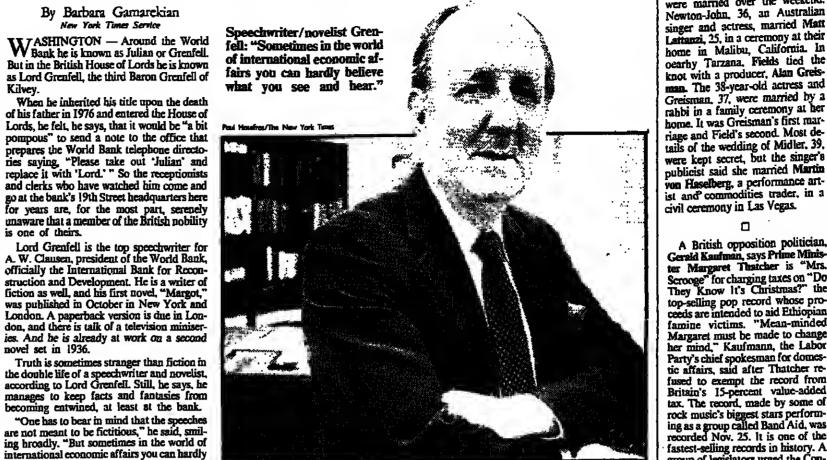

"How can I okay an increase for you, when I'm asking everyone else arms talks, so we don't have to give in the country to take dramatic up our weapons that do work. I cuts?" the president said.

"That's your problem. My job is to see that this country is protected, and 1 can't do it if your budget people keep nickel-and-diming me 'I see your point," the president said, "Perhaps we could re-examine our defense contracts. Maybe we're "All right," the president said.
